Rapunzel

Once upon a time there lived a beautiful princess called Rapunzel. She had long, wavy hair which shimmered golden like the sun.

One day, Rapunzel was captured by an evil witch who locked her up all alone in a tall, dark tower. There was no escape! The witch visited every day.

"Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair!"

called the witch. Then, using Rapunzel's hair as a rope, up she climbed.

Every day, the witch brushed Rapunzel's hair and stole some of the golden locks to sell for riches. As she left with her treasure, the witch cackled,

"You can never escape, Rapunzel! Leave the tower, and I will put a TERRIBLE curse on you!"

Rapunzel felt sad at the thought of being stuck in the tower for the rest of her life so she planned her escape.

The next day, as the witch climbed up Rapunzel's golden hair, Rapunzel cut off her golden locks 'snip, snip,' and sent the witch tumbling to the ground. The witches cursing days were done!

So Rapunzel finally climbed out of the tower down into the forest where she met a unicorn, who had also been set free from the witch's powers. From then on, they lived together in the forest and became famous for defeating evil witches.
